WINTER IS HERE!

Why Now Is The Time To Watch "Game Of Thrones"

Hopper Magazine is now
OnDISH Magazine.

The Statue of Liberty is the central figure, rendered in a dark, monochromatic color. She holds a torch aloft in her right hand and a tablet in her left. The background is a dramatic sky with a rainbow gradient, transitioning from deep blue at the top to vibrant orange and red near the horizon. The overall mood is one of historical significance and contemporary relevance.

Editor's Note

New Name. More Focus On You.

Did you notice? I hope so. We changed the name of your magazine from Hopper Magazine to OnDISH Magazine. We hope the new title is more welcoming to all DISH customers, no matter what type of receiver you may have — be it a Hopper, a 722, 512 or another. In addition to the name change, we will be adding new columns to keep you in the know on what's going on at DISH — you'll get updates straight from DISH's top leaders.

As always, we will continue to go behind the scenes in the programming world to keep you informed on what's new and what's worth watching, as well as provide updated channel lineups, daily TV listings and more.

That said, it's been over a year, but Game of Thrones finally returns for its penultimate season. Our senior writer, Lori Acken, details what's in store on page 14, but beware, there are major spoilers on previous seasons if you're not caught up. Honestly, I was initially late to the GOT fan craze and didn't start my binge-watch until the end of Season 4 (we are starting Season 7 this month). The sophisticated fantasy drama is a brutally enthralling, multi-character story that frequently leaves you feeling gut-punched and desperate to know what awaits. If there's one show I would recommend investing yourself in this summer, it's Game of Thrones.

As for new options this month, you've got plenty. CBS delivers a summer blockbuster in the series Salvation. TNT shows us Shakespeare's rowdy side in Will. ABC gives us chills with Somewhere Between. NBC freaks us out with its thriller Midnight, Texas, and AMC offers some laughs in Loaded.

Happy viewing!

DISH Chatter

■ Great 90-Year-Olds

Your June issue about stars over the age of 90 was excellent. I only regret you excluded Doris Day – one of the megastars of her time and now an animal rights icon. Good job otherwise! – Carol Thanks, Carol. There are several other great actors 90 and over but the documentary we were writing about, "If You're Not in the Obit, Eat Breakfast," did not feature Doris Day.

QUESTION OF THE MONTH:

Who would you like to see on the cover of this magazine & why?

Email us at dishletters@ntvbmedia.com

■ Loud Music On Programs

Like the person who wrote about the loud music, we also have been irritated by the excessively loud music on programs to the point that the dialogue is not heard. We stopped watching Hawaii Five-0, Blue Bloods and Law & Order: SVU due to the loud music. – Ann

We've received many letters about dialogue that can't be heard. One solution to that problem may very well be right in the palm of your hand – your remote control. If you have a newer television, it probably arrived with factory audio (sound) settings, which often means "surround sound" set to ON. Find your television remote (not your DISH remote) and hit the MENU button. Navigate to the AUDIO menu and scroll through your options to see if your television is set to "surround." If it is, turn it off.

If that isn't the problem, your newer television's audio controls may be set to other things like "concert," "movie" or "live" settings, often found under the USER menu. Either way, here's your chance to take control of your television's audio settings and find something that's right for you. You can probably adjust the bass, treble and other settings that might help you hear the dialogue better on your programs. Some newer sets even have a setting for "speech" (often under the USER menu).

■ A Great Feud

I usually don't write letters like this – in fact, I haven't written once since 1966 when CBS was threatening to cancel Guns smoke. I was sure it was my letter that saved it and kept it on the air for 10 more years. Anyway, I had to say how impressed I have been with the series FEUD: Bette and Joan. It is, without a doubt, the best thing I have seen in many years. Susan Sarandon and Jessica Lange are incredible. The atmosphere between those two women was so intense, I felt like I was right there with them, suffering throughout their careers, fighting their battles. It certainly puts Bette in a much better light. No sympathy for Joan. Please let me know where I might be able to find FEUD on DVD. – Sara

I had a pinup of Joan Crawford on my wall for years. My wife made me take it down, but my wife has Bette Davis eyes. – Al

Loved your letters. I'm sending you both a copy of our puzzle magazine "ReMIND." You can preorder "FEUD" through amazon.com.

■ Easter Neglect

Why don't we celebrate Easter anymore? I remember a time when I was a child that they would show just as many animated specials at Easter as they would at Christmas. Now they don't even show the Peanuts special. Come to think of it, did they show the Peanuts Valentine special? What gives? Why is Christmas the only holiday they seem to celebrate to death? I would rather celebrate Easter instead. – Joann

Hmmm ... I'm thinking Santa and all those wacky elves are way more entertaining than that boring, unrealistic bunny. On the religious side, which truly is what these holidays are all about, both are amazing celebrations that deserve equal attention. I only recall "The Ten Commandments," "Easter Parade," "Ben-Hur" and "The Robe" being on around that time, so I hear what you are saying. Now this month you'll see plenty of Fourth of July specials.

■ Training Day

Some friends and I really liked the show Training Day and often talked about episodes after they aired. I really liked Bill Paxton's (R.I.P.) character and want to know what is going to happen now? I noticed CBS pulled the show from the air. – Juan

I don't see much hope for another network or streaming service picking it up. "Training Day" and "Ransom" were CBS' lowest-rated and least-watched dramas.

■ Include your address when you write or email us and we'll most likely send you something. We're not promising, we're just saying. Also, if you didn't know this, the letters and opinions above reflect the views of our readers, so don't go crazy on us because you don't like what someone else said.

SHARK WEEK ATTACKS AGAIN!

Discovery's Annual Favorite Returns. By Jeff Pfeiffer

Celebrating its 29th year in 2017, Discovery Channel's Shark Week has become a summertime staple over three decades and hundreds of programs.

Although most specific details about this year's weeklong event, which airs on the network beginning July 23, weren't available at presstime, Discovery did give us these tidbits to bite on:

- Olympic gold medal swimmer Michael Phelps will take part in a Shark Week special this year
- Chris Noth of Sex and the City will narrate the special Sharks and the City: New York
- Other confirmed new specials include African Shark Safari, Great White Serial Killer Lives, Shark Swarm and Shark-Croc Showdown

SYFY LIVE FROM COMIC-CON

Once Again, Syfy Has The Insider Info Fans Want To Know. By Meredith Ennis

Each year since 1970, San Diego has played host to Comic-Con, the place to be for pop culture "nerds" from all genres. This fan-centric event has been billed as "the largest convention of its kind in the world" by Forbes.

Syfy will be on hand at this year's event to share all of the breaking news, insider party coverage, exclusive content and sneak peeks of the most anticipated films and TV series (Marvel's The Defenders!) appearing at Comic-Con 2017, with three nights of live-to-tape, one-hour primetime specials from the center of the action. From July 20-22, Syfy will be the source for celebrity interviews and behind-the-scenes access that the regular conventiongoer won't see. Zachary Levi (Chuck) hosts Syfy's coverage.

While many of the details for this year's event have yet to be announced, an appearance by Stan Lee and an Outlander show panel are confirmed.

4 Questions

With ... Andrea Savage Of truTV's "I'm Sorry."

By Barb Oates

Andrea Savage wants to create a new TV image of a mom. "As a woman, in this industry, once you start becoming of an age where you play a parent, the mom roles are just terrible. They're just boring," the writer, producer and comedy darling said. "I'm a mother and wife. I'm not boring. I'm funny. I'm dirty. I'm flawed." Inspired by true stories from her own life, and with support from industry geniuses like Andy Samberg, Will Ferrell, Jessica Elbaum, Adam McCay and Gloria Sanchez, she created I'm Sorry (Wednesdays beginning July 12 on truTV). The series follows comedy writer Andrea (played by Savage) as she navigates the oftentimes self-induced complications of her life alongside her more strait-laced husband Mike (Tom Everett Scott) and their inquisitive daughter Amelia (Olive Petrucci). Here Savage tells us a little bit more about her series and self.

■ What finally pushed you over the edge to make this series materialize?

Well, really part of it was finding the people to help me make it materialize. I've been developing it for many years. ... All the shows were inspired by true stories in my life, and I was like, "I've got a lot of really good stories that are very specific and kind of funny and crazy, but they're very universal at the same time, about what you're going through in your 30s and 40s." I really was just like, "I want to be the person who puts that mom character on TV." We're doing it.

■ What are three TV shows that you would recommend to your friends that totally make you laugh?

I will preface this with, I watch very little TV ... Catastrophe, I love. I love Veep. Not because I'm on [she plays Laura Montez]; I was a huge fan before. By the way – and again, not because I'm on it – Episodes is great. It legitimately makes me laugh.

■ What three things do you have to have in your fridge or pantry?

My fridge looks like a bachelor pad. It's rough. I'm not great. We're always like, "Why do we have no food in the house?" and I'm like, "I'm at the market constantly." I eat a lot of peanut butter. I would say peanut butter and sour candies.

■ What's a movie you can watch over and over again?

I love Moonstruck. I watch it every year.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

TV's Scott Brothers On Brotherly Love And Twinsanity. By Kellie Freeze

Seeing double: HGTV's Drew and Jonathan Scott

out all these things I was gonna change in the design, and they're going along with it at first. Then they realized that everything I was saying was a little over the top and were finally like, "Wait a minute!" And Jonathan came walking in.

Have you two ever had a freaky twin-sense moment?

Jonathan: When we were in college, I woke up one morning, my knee was killing me. I thought maybe I slept funny on it. That afternoon, I was talking to my mom and she was like, "Oh, that's weird because this morning your brother tore his knee and had to go into the hospital." So we've had some weird coincidences that you can only chalk up to paranormal twin activity.

What's something that one of you is good at that the other one is not?

Jonathan: I'm a magician, so I've been performing magic most of my life and I would say that's probably mine.

Drew: I would say for me, if you think of parkour or American Ninja Warrior, that's something I'm pretty good at, but Jonathan's not as agile.

The two hottest faces in TV home improvement look nearly identical. Twins Drew and Jonathan Scott, a real estate agent and contractor, respectively, star on a variety of HGTV series including Brother vs. Brother and the Property Brothers franchise. We caught up with the brothers (their playful older brother J.D. also joins them in some of their adventures) to get to know renovation television's brightest – and most charming – stars.

Jonathan: Drew's the most competitive man I've ever met in my life. He has to win at getting to the car first. I mean everything! I think it's how we accomplish all the things that we do and the success that we've seen.

Ever done a twin switcheroo?

Drew: We have! On Property Brothers, we had twins that we were working with, Sandy and Susy. During renovation, they kept switching on Jonathan and they looked so much alike you couldn't tell. So one day I swapped with Jonathan, and I came in wearing all the construction gear. They had no idea. I started plunking

How The HopperGO SAVED MY SANITY!

By Colleen Skells

Summer is here, which means that some of us are about to embark on vacations to escape our fast-paced lives and get some much-needed R&R.

While I love traveling (even though a lot of it is for work!), there is one thing I am very bad at: waiting. And unfortunately for me, there's a lot of waiting when traveling. So when I encounter the extremely first-world problem of having to wait and entertain myself, I typically reach for my Kindle Fire to do some much overdue reading.

Recently, I encountered a situation in which my entertainment plan failed me. The hotel where I was staying lost all power – no TV, no Wi-Fi ... I couldn't even turn a light on in my room. Naturally, the first thing that went through my mind was, "Great, what am I going to do now?" I had already finished the book I was reading on my Kindle, and with no Wi-Fi in the hotel, I couldn't stream TV. I certainly didn't want to waste any of the 15 percent battery life I had left on my phone. Thankfully, I remembered transferring recordings from my Hopper 3's DVR to my HopperGO before I left for the airport. Score! You've gotta love when technology comes through for you in your time of need.

If you don't know about the HopperGO, it's DISH's media storage device that lets you transfer recordings from your internet-connected Hopper With Sling or Hopper 3, and then watch shows on your mobile device using the DISH Anywhere app or dishanywhere.com.

The HopperGO has its own internal Wi-Fi, so all I had to do was log in to it on my Kindle Fire (you can do the same on your smartphone or tablet), open the DISH Anywhere app, and then choose the recording I wanted to watch. I have never been so excited to binge-watch The Real Housewives in my life. (Yes, judge if you want, but it's my guilty pleasure!)

The next morning, I got to thinking more about how useful the HopperGO could be. For example, when you are doing my favorite task of waiting, such as in the airport, doctor's office, auto repair shop, etc., the HopperGO could really help pass the time by letting you watch your favorite shows. Since five devices can be connected to the HopperGO at any one time, I can also see parents using it on long plane rides or car trips to entertain all of their kiddos for hours.

Really, the HopperGO is just a great way to keep customers connected to the TV service they love. I know I will be using it this summer – no matter where my travels take me!

To learn more about the HopperGO, visit mydish.com/hoppergo, or for help setting up your HopperGO, visit mydish.com/support or youtube.com/user/dish to view a step-by-step video.

DISH Cares

Launched in 2014, DISH Cares is designed to serve the communities where DISH operates. The focus of this corporate citizenship program is on making a positive impact on our people, our communities and our planet. In 2016, DISH Cares held 674 events that supported local communities across the nation. Below are just a handful of the causes that were supported last year.

“At DISH, creating a strong business and empowering local communities are symbiotic goals. We are proud of our ability to connect people — no matter how remote their home may be — to entertainment, and that connectivity extends to our corporate citizenship program. Our social impact efforts join our team members, our customers and our communities together to build long-term success for us and for the places where we live and work.”

CANDY CRUSH

The Addictive Mobile App Gets Its Own TV Show AND Mario Lopez.

By Marisa Roffman

Mario Lopez

Candy Crush, the highly addictive game app familiar to commuters and commercial-avoiders everywhere, will now take up residence on the largest interactive screen imaginable. (The massive panel featured on this CBS newbie is potentially the biggest ever seen in this genre.) The popular pastime, which requires swapping adjacent “candies” to form a row of at least three matching items, is coming to life as a full-on primetime game show. And this time folks get to use more than their digits to make all the magic happen. (Harnesses! Ladders! Claws!) Mario Lopez — already plenty busy with his regular gig on Extra — is an emcee who knows a little something about game shows (he’s previously competed on Hollywood Game Night, Celebrity Family Feud and Celebrity Name Game, to name a few). We spoke to the affable host about feeling the Crush, and why he tends to lose his voice from excitement.

What made you want to be a part of this version of Candy Crush?

Mario Lopez: I’ve always been a game player, including Candy Crush. Everyone is familiar with it, but I don’t think you need to have played it in order to enjoy the show. It’s going to be incredibly exciting.

How do the contestants win?

There’s a preliminary round where you’re getting points to see who is going to play in the finals. And then two teams will go head-to-head on vertical and horizontal screens. I lost my voice every show, I was getting into it so much.

You’ve been a contestant on shows like this lots of times. What’s it like to finally be on the other side of things?

We have real folks from all walks of life, all sorts of backgrounds. And I love meeting people from all over. They all feel like they’re my friends, because they grew up [seeing me on TV].

What are your go-to shows at the moment?

There’s so much it almost feels like homework. I’ve got all kinds of great documentaries I want to watch. But right now, at the moment, Better Call Saul. Game of Thrones, of course, is around the corner. I still need to catch up on Billions. I just finished Homeland. This Is Us, as far as network shows. And Modern Family!

SUMMER'S TOP GAME SHOWS!

Seven Game Shows To Keep You (And Your Brain) Entertained.
And Here's What It Takes To Win Them. By Andrea Verschage

BEAT SHAZAM

FOX, Thursdays

What's At Stake? Up to $1 million

What's It Take?

- Musical knowledge (preferably from many genres)
- A fast buzzer finger – and a musical friend whose buzzer finger is also fast

Go to your car, turn on the radio and hit the scan button. Try to ID each song before your radio goes to the next channel. If you're good at that, you'd be good at this. The show features hit songs of every genre (so don't worry, you don't have to know the offbeat indie songs on the hipster station).

EMOGENIUS

GSN, Wednesdays

What's At Stake? Up to $10,000

What's It Take?

- Picture-decoding skills, including the ability to deduce double meanings
- A friend who's as emoji-savvy as you. Check your text history. You'll know them when you see them. They send messages like this:

Remember children's menus where you had to decode a message based on pictures alone? No, really, it's like that, but with strung-together cellphone emojis, used creatively (for example, a toilet emoji may just be a toilet, but it also may be a john or a bowl). Some of the answers will have you 🤔.

FEAR FACTOR

MTV, Tuesdays

What's At Stake? $50,000

What's It Take?

- A strong stomach
- A general sense of adventure
- The ability to dissociate and/or leave your body wouldn't hurt

Take the thing you're most afraid of and imagine being absolutely immersed in it. Terrified of insects? Well, there's something in Fear Factor called "Roach-ella" – just picture that (shudder). It takes some mental (and intestinal) fortitude.

HOLLYWOOD GAME NIGHT

NBC, Thursdays

What's At Stake? Up to $25,000

What's It Take?

- Be a party person

Think you could handle playing party games with celebrities? Charades, guessing games and trivia, all while hobnobbing with some of today's top stars – sounds like a winner!

IDIOTEST

GSN, Thursdays

What's At Stake? Up to $10,000

What's It Take?

- Logic skills and a keen eye for detail
- A friend or family member as smart as you who wants to be on a game show

For this one you need to be able to think on your feet and quickly answer questions and solve puzzles designed to trick you. Basically, you need to prove you're not an idiot. Easy, right?

THE $100,000 PYRAMID

ABC, Sundays

What's At Stake? Up to $100,000

What's It Take?

- Quick thinking
- The ability to keep a cool head when paired with a celebrity (there's no time to be starstruck!)

This word-association game, where celebrities and everyday folks are paired up, has been around forever, and for good reason. It's a winner in our books, and it's not a long shot to say that if you're a quick thinker, you could be a winner, too.

THE WALL

NBC, Thursdays

What's At Stake? Up to $12 million!

What's It Take?

- Strength under pressure and coolheadedness
- General knowledge
- Having a soulmate or BFF can't hurt

Your winnings can change – by a lot – in an instant, so you'll need to be able to handle some major emotional roller coasters. You're paired up with someone you know very well – good thing, because you need a pretty good idea of what they know and what questions they can answer correctly.

GAME OF THRONES

Isaac Hempstead Wright Talks Season 7:
“Bran Should Be Very, Very Frightened!”

By Lori Acken

Now that he's Game of Thrones' omniscient Three-Eyed Raven, the rise of Isaac Hempstead Wright's Bran Stark as a Westeros power player seems all but assured as the HBO hit heads into its penultimate season. With clans Lannister, Targaryen and Stark – and all their trusted and dubious allies – preoccupied with the Iron Throne, young Bran knows best the bigger threat that looms. Dialing in from the U.K., the 18-year-old Brit shared some knowledge of his own about Season 7, the Starks' future as a family – and why we need to get over Hodor.

I promised myself I wouldn't give you crap about Hodor – but do you ever, say, meet Kristian Nairn for lunch and have him tote you into the restaurant for old times' sake?

Isaac Hempstead Wright: Oh, yeah! I'm like, "my Hodor Uber!" [Laughs] But I do see Kristian regularly. We're always texting and taking the piss out of each other.

When I told people I was interviewing the gent who plays Bran, a common reaction was "Oh, the guy who ruins everything!" Set folks straight about Bran's worth and purpose.

People really got angry at Bran after Hodor. I woke up to a torrent of abuse from the internet – "@#$$% you, Bran! I hate you!" Really, guys, blame the writers! This is not my doing! But to be honest, it's almost a relief that Bran doesn't have many people left around him, because now he can just focus on being the Three-Eyed Raven. Bran a while back had to surrender being a normal person and it became clear that he was still in a much wider, much, much more powerful game than just vying for the throne and endless cycling between various houses.

This does appear to be the season that we find out Bran's true calling ... It's a very interesting new time for him. This is what we've been leading up to in Bran's story arc ever since he fell out of that tower in Season 1. When we're first introduced to him, it's like "OK, yep – grow up and be a knight. Very good! You'll be a Stark nobleman!" And then that was so completely out the window, pardon the pun. Ever since, it's been clear that Bran has had this sort of predetermined, more important role to play. So to actually have reached that after what feels like an eternity, it's exciting – and nerve-wracking!

How is he handling his rather unwieldy powers now that he is the Three-Eyed Raven, he no longer has a mentor, and it's go time?

Well, the Three-Eyed Raven himself said to Bran, "You're not ready for this." [Laughs] So, it's really frightening that Bran is now the Three-Eyed Raven, and he hasn't completed the full training. The last time Bran gave it a shot, it ended catastrophically – and now the whole Wall's pretty much in his hands. So he really needs to keep a very level head and come to terms with the fact he is the Three-Eyed Raven, he's not Bran Stark. He's got to come into his own.

But he's also more vulnerable than ever, because he's marked by the Night King – in more ways than one – and the wights can attack him anywhere. What might happen there?

As you said, Bran now has the mark of the Night on him, and I don't really understand the technicalities of why that means the spell doesn't work now. But basically the Night King and the Three-Eyed Raven are archenemies from the beginning of time. We saw when the Night King came in and killed the Three-Eyed Raven that was played by Max von Sydow, there was that tension there between these two ancient foes finally battling it out, of finally that chapter coming to a close. I love that every character in Game of Thrones has got some serious enemies after them, but Bran now has the most powerful creature in the history of Westeros on his tail, and that might destroy him. Bran should be very, very frightened.

But there's strength in numbers, and viewers clamor for a reunion of the surviving Stark kids – even though we now know that Jon Snow isn't one. Hope for that this season?

I can't comment on any specifics, but they've all been in very different corners of Westeros, doing very different things. Arya is a ninja assassin. Sansa is a sort of cynical diplomat in many ways; she's been around some of the cruelest characters in the Game of Thrones world. And Jon has grown into this super-warrior. So, I think if the four of them did get back together in the future, who knows whether they'd even get on? Would it be the reunion everyone has hoped for? I don't know!

After losing her last living child, Cersei Lannister (Lena Headey) is on a quest for power. Her most trusted ally is her brother (also father to her children) Jaime (Nikolaj Coster-Waldau).

Uh-oh! Well, on the subject of unity, Bran arguably has the best understanding of the White Walkers and the Wall – and we are clearly headed to a showdown between the living and the dead. Could these final seasons entail an epic truce?

I think we'd all like to think that the living would come together in the face of this universal threat. But you look at all the endless petty squabbling that goes on between these various houses and I don't know whether people will be able to get over their own qualms with other people enough to be able to recognize the threat. They really do have to come together – and even if they were to come together, it would still be a pretty close call. You're up against a massive army of ice zombies, so you're going to need the biggest army possible, it seems.

Will

Meet Will Shakespeare, The Hottest New Playwright Of 1589.

By Ryan A. Berenz

Before he became the bane of uninterested high-school students, William Shakespeare was a total badass.

Shakespeare's influence permeates everything in American popular culture, yet the misperception persists that his works are highbrow oeuvres accessible only to the intelligentsia. Shakespeare didn't write plays to be performed in ivory towers or to be read in third period English class. He was a common man who created entertainment for an audience of common Londoners. Shakespeare was a rock star.

TNT's new period drama Will depicts Shakespeare as a wide-eyed young dreamer who leaves his wife, kids and the small town of Stratford to pursue his ambitions of fame and fortune in London's theater scene. But in Will, the theater scene looks more like a mosh pit at an Insane Clown Posse show than a matinee at the Old Vic. Everything from the soundtrack to the costumes has the vibe of Elizabethan England by way of the Sex Pistols.

Playing the part of Shakespeare is Laurie Davidson, whose first acting job for the screen happens to be the role of a lifetime. "I grew up in London going to the theater. I grew up with these plays and seeing this guy's work," Davidson says. "When I heard they were making this TV show, I was like, 'I need to get this part. Are you kidding me? It's too good to be true.'" Davidson put in his work and did eight auditions to get the role. He was released from drama school to shoot the Will pilot, then returned to complete his degree at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art.

Like a plot from one of his plays, Shakespeare's journey in Will is wrought with danger, intrigue and romance. Will's an outsider challenging superstar playwrights like Christopher Marlowe (Jamie Campbell Bower). He's testing his morals in a passionate affair with Alice Burbage (Olivia DeJonge), the theater owner's daughter. And he's putting his life at risk by being Catholic at a time in England when it was punishable by grisly death.

That leads to scenes in Will that are more Titus Andronicus than A Midsummer Night's Dream. Shakespeare is in the sights of the queen's enforcer, Richard Topcliffe (Ewen Bremner), who delights in torturing suspected traitors. "Things were brutal. Everything was so much more visceral," Davidson says. "People were killed in the street, and that was part of their spectator sport. The Elizabethans, as much as they were the greatest lovers, they were also the most horrific and brutal." You've been warned.

Shakespeare's stories are still told today because they dealt with universal themes, and a 21st-century TV audience will find Will's struggles not all that different from their own. "For Will, he follows his dreams and his passions in the face of poverty, in the face of danger from Topcliffe, in the face of persecution," Davidson says. "The actors were often outcast, and the artists — still as it is today — are neglected sometimes. We forget how important art is to reflect the society that we're in. And that's really what Shakespeare wanted to do. He wanted to hold up a mirror to his society and to the nature of mankind."

► Will → TNT → Mondays beginning July 10

#Would Shakespeare Tweet?

"You can't just make up words!" an actor scolds unknown playwright Will Shakespeare (Laurie Davidson) in TNT's Will. The word in question is "bedazzle," and it's one of the many English words attributed to or made popular by Shakespeare.

Shakespeare would definitely relate to the kids these days with their texting and tweeting and #hashtags. "It's so relevant for today," Davidson says. "People are constantly apprehensive about the use of hashtags and new words being added to the dictionary, and the way we text and the way we use emoji. The way we communicate has changed so much in the last 10 years because of social media and technology."

Not even Shakespeare is safe. There's a series of young adult books called OMG Shakespeare, in which Juliet's line "O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon" from Romeo and Juliet gets translated as "you swear on a piece of rock in the sky? um."

Some scholars argue that this treatment dumbs down Shakespeare, but Davidson thinks the Bard would've approved. "William Shakespeare for sure would've used emoji," he says.

And Shakespeare would definitely be mad that he didn't invent #covfefe.

New CBS Thriller Arrives In Time To Save The World From A Boring Summer.

By Kellie Freeze

Summer's biggest blockbuster is a quest to save the Earth, and the action can't be found in your local multiplex – it's on CBS. Salvation flies onto the airwaves this month when an MIT grad student (Charlie Rowe) discovers that a planet-killing asteroid is six months away from destroying the Earth. He takes his findings to a tech superstar (Santiago Cabrera), and they, together with a Pentagon official (Jennifer Finnigan), set a secret course to save the planet.

Our chat with two of the series' stars reveals the substance behind Salvation's sizzle. Cabrera describes his character, Darius Tanz, as an "incredible visionary" who altruistically wants to help mankind, but who is a loner trapped by the different way he looks at the world. But Cabrera imagines Darius as more than a solitary super-genius. "I think it's that nature of when you think about superheroes, people that have a gift, they sacrifice a normal life to be able to use that gift for the betterment of the world."

Finnigan calls her character, Grace, the series' "moral compass," and loves that she defies expectations and gets steamy scenes with her hunky boss, Harris (played by Ian Anthony Dale). "We see her starting off as this very by-the-book official government worker, and then all of a sudden, by Episode 2 she's doing things that she never would have thought she'd do – she's breaking rules, she's telling lies, she's going behind people's back." And these new choices are Grace's attempt to ensure a future for her daughter – and all of humanity.

Every blockbuster needs an epic baddie, and Salvation's villain is more than a hunk of interstellar debris. "Let's put it this way," Finnigan teases. "Harris and the government are making decisions that are potentially much more advantageous to the United States."

High concept, high action and high drama are a winning combination, says Cabrera. "It feels like a summer blockbuster," he says. "I keep calling it 'a popcorn show,'" laughs Finnigan. "But when I say 'a popcorn show,' I want to say 'a popcorn show plus,' because the writing is really good and the acting is really good."

Paula Patton stars as a mother trying to change her fate

SOMEWHERE BETWEEN

Paula Patton's Maternal Instinct Has A Supernatural Twist. By Kellie Freeze

In the summertime thriller Somewhere Between, Paula Patton stars as Laura Price, a savvy news producer who doesn't know why her daughter will be killed or by whom, but she knows when, where and how.

This dark, female-led thriller is chock-full of twists and shocking revelations that will surprise viewers at every turn. "I hope that viewers will be entertained, have fun and that their hearts and souls will be moved by the story and by what the characters are experiencing," says Patton. Because despite the action and suspense, the core of the tale is a mother's unwavering devotion to her child.

"Fate plays an enormous role in the series, which is what is so fun about it," Patton shares. "The series is about the real world we live in, yet it has this turn on reality and on the idea [of] what would happen if we ever got the chance to live a part of our lives again. My character has been through a devastating loss and tragedy, yet she gets a chance to change her fate."

Somewhere Between is based on the Korean drama God's Gift: 14 Days. The delicious mystery of the series is what drew Patton to the project. The actress reveals, "I liked that the script was a compelling and thrilling read that I could not put down. It moves so fast and is like a runaway train – you don't know where it's going to go!"

While we don't know where it will go, we do know where it will end. Patton confirms, "The story is resolved at the end of the 10-episode season."

REMEMBER ME

Monty Python's Michael Palin Is A Spooky Senior In PBS' Three-Part Brit Import.

By Lori Acken

For Flying Circus fans, seeing Monty Python's Michael Palin – he of the "Lumberjack Song" and "NO-body expects the Spanish Inquisition" – as a frail, terrorized and possibly terrifying retirement home resident seems scary enough. But Palin is deliciously creepy and poignant in Remember Me, his first lead role in a TV drama in 20-plus years. Debuting in the U.K. in 2014 and making its American debut this month on PBS, Remember Me features the now 74-year-old Palin as Tom Parfitt, an elderly Brit at a crossroads in the twilight of his life. On the day he moves to an old folks' home, seriously unsavory things begin happening to everyone around him. Though local cops, led by world-weary Detective Rob Fairholme (Mark Addy, Game of Thrones), are dubious, teen caregiver Hannah (The White Princess' Jodie Comer) convinces Fairholme to dig a bit deeper – especially after Tom goes missing and a dark revelation from his past suggests that otherworldly forces might be in play.

MIDNIGHT, TEXAS

There's Something Really Strange About This Guy Named Manfred And This Town Called Midnight.

By Iléane Rudolph

If you miss True Blood, the sexy supernatural series based on Charlaine Harris' bestsellers, you might want to add some tasty Midnight, Texas barbecue to your summer fantasy menu. NBC's new thriller is adapted from Harris' trilogy about a Lone Star burg populated by freaks hiding themselves away from normal society.

The otherworldly drama begins when a medium named Manfred Bernardo (Blindspot's François Arnaud) arrives in Midnight. "He's on the run because he's done some very bad things to some very bad people," Arnaud explains. "He wants to settle down in a calm, peaceful place — and his dead grandmother suggests he'd fit right in there." Yep, Manfred communicates with spirits.

"It starts with Manfred Bernardo, who we first think is a gigolo and a scam artist, but then we realize that he has abilities, he can see the dead, and if the dead are strong enough they can take over his body and hijack his body," explains executive producer Monica Owusu-Breen (Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.). "This guy who's felt like he's on the outside of the world, always felt like the weirdo in the room, is told by his dead grandma to move to Midnight, Texas. And it's in Midnight, Texas, that he finds that he's not the only freak in the room."

The one-stoplight town is far from the quiet sanctuary he was hoping for. The house he's rented is full of ghosts, and when a woman is found dead during a picnic, the Midnight citizenry — including a vampire (Peter Mensah), a weretiger (Yul Vazquez), a witch (Parisa Fitz-Henley) and an angel (Jason Lewis) — becomes wary of the newcomer. So do the few local humans, except for a pretty young waitress named Creek (Parenthood's Sarah Ramos).

"Manfred and Creek quickly bond over their dark pasts," Arnaud says. "Like her, he struggles with demons inside him." True Blood was driven by sex and desire, "but the theme in Midnight," says Owusu-Breen, "is community — people who are different wanting to live in peace with their tribe." That wish, already threatened by suspicious cops and a vicious gang, could face total destruction as the season goes on.

Also jeopardizing their utopia is the fray in the thin veil between our world and hell. "And soon," she adds, "there will be a decision to make: flee the coming conflict or protect the place they've finally found a real home in."

➤ Midnight, Texas → NBC → Mondays beginning July 24

John Singleton's Tale Of L.A.'s Crack Cocaine Plague. By Ryan A. Berenz

Director John Singleton broke into film with 1991's acclaimed Boyz n the Hood, which was largely based on his experiences growing up in South Central Los Angeles. His new FX drama series, Snowfall, returns to those L.A. neighborhoods to explore how the explosion of crack cocaine in the early 1980s turned them into war zones.

Snowfall opens in the summer of 1983, when the streets of South Central still had ice cream vendors and kids on bicycles carrying boomboxes. "One of the things that we try to do starting out with this season is show how, when we go into South Central, how different it was then," Singleton says. "There were no bars on the windows, less fences. That happens once this whole snowfall, as we call it, pervades the neighborhood. People change, families change, alliances change, [everything] becomes more dangerous."

The drama revolves around characters whose vastly different worlds collide and catalyze L.A.'s crack epidemic. Franklin (Damson Idris) is an enterprising young pot dealer who takes a huge risk by entering the cocaine trade. Lucia (Emily Rios) is the daughter of a Mexican drug kingpin who wants to bring the family business into something more profitable than smuggling marijuana. Gustavo (Sergio Peris-Mencheta) is "El Oso," a luchador who also does Lucia's dirty work. And Alejandro (Juan Javier Cárdenas) is a Contra rebel from Nicaragua, who allies with CIA officer Teddy (Carter Hudson) in a secret exchange of drugs for financial aid to the Contras.

The CIA involvement in L.A.'s crack explosion is a contentious idea that was investigated in journalist Gary Webb's 1996 "Dark Alliance" newspaper reports. Many of Webb's claims have since been debunked. But Snowfall isn't a documentary, and the CIA angle is worth creative exploration.

"I don't think there was any conspiracy to bring crack to the inner city or destroy a people," says Snowfall's co-creator Dave Andron. "I think they looked the other way. At the time, cocaine was a rich white man's drug. Nobody saw what crack would do to these people."

➤ Snowfall → FX → Wednesdays beginning July 5

MOSQUITO

The Most Hated And Deadliest Animal In The World. By Barb Oates

Forget about sharks and snakes — the Anopheles gambiae mosquito and others (yes, there are over 3,500 species of mosquitoes) are causing more deaths in the world than any other animal. So how does a tiny mosquito become the most dangerous animal in the world? Discovery Channel takes a frightening look in the captivating documentary Mosquito.

Malaria. Zika. Dengue. Yellow fever. West Nile virus. Chikungunya. The spread of all of these diseases can be traced back to mosquitoes. It took Zika, however, to focus the world's attention on this rising epidemic.

"Between 1947 — when Zika was first discovered in East Africa and Uganda — and 2007, there were 14 documented cases," shares Dr. Bart Knols, a medical entomologist. "It is being estimated 2.5 billion people, almost a third of the human population worldwide, might sooner or later become infected by this virus. Now if that isn't a signal that the world is changing at a dramatic pace, then, you know, I don't know."

About Some Of These Boys ...

Ewan (Jonny Sweet)

He's the introvert — the nerd of the group — but the brains. Casey's actually repulsed by him. "I mean she literally just looks past him," McCormack says. "She'd say, 'Let's have a meeting,' and then name everybody but him."

Watto (Nick Helm)

He's the talented artist who designed the graphics for the video games. He is a recovering drug addict turned obsessive shopper. "I think at one point he buys hundreds and hundreds of pairs of Birkenstocks for no reason," McCormack laughs. "Instead of doing drugs, he has to find some other compulsive behavior to fill the hole."

LOADED

Dramedy Proves That Money Will Only Make You More Of What You Already Are. So If You're A Jerk, You're Going To Be A REAL Jerk. By Barb Oates

Just imagine. You've invested billions of man-hours building an upstart company with your closest friends. After all of that blood, sweat, shouting, swearing and fighting, you actually do it. You make your fortune. You celebrate with your friends and life is now perfect, right?

Wrongo.

AMC's new dramedy Loaded shows how having obscene amounts of money and excess can go horribly (and hilariously) wrong. Based on the award-winning Israeli series Mesudarim, the eight-episode series follows four British entrepreneurs — eclectic childhood friends Josh (Jim Howick), Leon (Samuel Anderson), Watto (Nick Helm) and Ewan (Jonny Sweet) — who sell their upstart video game company for millions.

Mary McCormack (The West Wing, In Plain Sight) stars as Casey — who she describes as a "sexy Darth Vader." Casey is the guys' no-nonsense boss from the American company that purchases their business. "She's horrible. She's really, really tough on them and she makes it difficult for them," McCormack says. "I think they thought it was going to be all fun and then she shows up."

The series is a healthy mix of comedy and drama that explores themes of friendship, ambition, gluttony and one's general distaste for other people's success.

"I think my stuff is more in the land of comedy, but the boys have more complex lives," she adds. "The boys have family and love interest stuff going on that doesn't always land with jokes. The show feels particularly English in that way, that it lives right smack in the middle of the two genres. It feels more like the BBC Office was, where it was definitely a comedy, but it would also break your heart."

For this group, having money just amplifies who they really are. Take, for example, Watto, a recovering drug addict who is now addicted to shopping. "If you're afraid, you're just more afraid. If you're a dick, you're just more of a dick," McCormack says. "In England that kind of success people immediately want to see fail. It's just not quite the same relationship to money and overnight success [that Americans have]. I don't think it's as celebrated."

And that's where much of the humor is drawn from. "I was laughing from page one and then I got to my character's part and I just thought, 'Oh my God, she's insane,'" McCormack concludes. "She has a whole riff on when [Brits] say 'thank you' five times before they move on. ... They're just overly polite and so all that made me laugh."

Cheers to that!

Casey (Mary McCormack)

Kevin Bacon, Kyra Sedgwick (as director) and Ryann Shane on the set of "Story of a Girl"

Kyra Sedgwick Adapts Sara Zarr's Novel Into A Family-Affair Film On Lifetime. By Lori Acken

Lifetime's Story of a Girl begins like many a modern parent-teen nightmare. Middle-schooler Deanna Lambert (Ryann Shane) is wooed by her big brother's handsome flatterer of a best friend, takes a giant step toward adulthood and, in no time, learns a video of her "first time" has gone public – branding her a pariah at school and turning her home into a silently simmering war zone. But before you roll your eyes at the prospect of yet another "don't post your naughty bits" cautionary tale, know this.

Based on Sara Zarr's young-adult novel and helmed by actress and first-time director Kyra Sedgwick, Story of a Girl gives the moment its due, then moves on to what truly matters – what happens next when we make a mistake that won't let us go.

Working as a mechanic after he loses his white-collar job, Deanna's dad Ray (Scandal's Jon Tenney) is driven further into despair when Deanna's video surfaces – a sin he can't forgive even three years later – and her brother Darren (Iain Belcher) impregnates his girlfriend Stacy (Sedgwick's daughter, Sosie Bacon), moving into the basement with his young family instead of moving on to a bright future. But when Deanna lands a job at a local pizzeria owned by unflappable Michael (Sedgwick's husband Kevin Bacon), a quirky local with an outsider tale of his own, and discovers their only other coworker is painfully familiar, it sets in motion a long overdue cycle of self-awareness ... and, ultimately, forgiveness.

Set in a small seaboard town and filled with quiet but potent moments, Story of a Girl boasts a welcome Judy Blume-like feel as Deanna, now 16, tries to craft a life beyond being the girl in that video whose dad can't look her in the eye. There are no emotional pyrotechnics, no wince-worthy stereotypes – just believable, wounded souls trying to cope with life's sucker punches. "It is about connection and the fragility of connection and families and how quickly and easily they get fractured," says Sedgwick, "and, with that, how forgiveness can feel so far away. This is also very much a father-daughter story and a family story. How do you take control of your own narrative as a young woman, as a young man? How does a father wrap his arms around the young woman that was the young girl when she gets older and starts becoming a sexual being?

"I also think it's so fascinating to see that Deanna's getting shamed for what she did when she was 13 – and her brother is living in the basement with his baby mama!" says Sedgwick, who wanted to make a film that echoed the after-school specials and coming-of-age movies that comforted her when she was young. "It's like, no one's talking about that sexual act; they're only talking about her sexual act. And it's not just because it was on the internet; it's because girls shouldn't want to have sex."

Sedgwick says directing Shane – who at 23 is not just believable but also a wonder as the teenage Deanna – made her job easy. And telling this family story with her own family (son Travis provided music) was a dream come true. "It was amazing working with my family," she says. "It was so easy to direct Kevin and Sosie. I pray that people actually watch this together as a family, too."

VICTORY LAPS

Dale Earnhardt Jr. heads for the checkered flag of his NASCAR Cup Series career

Dale Earnhardt Jr. Races At Daytona For The Final Time. By Ryan A. Berenz

Daytona International Speedway has a special place in Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s NASCAR legacy. He has two wins and eight other top 10 finishes in the Daytona 500, and he's won the summer race at Daytona twice. It's also the track where his father died in a last-lap crash at the 2001 Daytona 500. On July 1, Earnhardt will compete at the famed track for the final time.

Earnhardt Jr. announced in April that the 2017 season will be his last one as a full-time driver, though his influence on the sport will be felt for many years to come. "I don't think Dale Jr. can be measured as just a racecar driver, because he is so much more than that," says Steve Letarte, current NASCAR on NBC analyst and Earnhardt's former crew chief. "Dale is all-encompassing. He carried the popularity of a sport on his shoulders. Anyone who tries to separate what he does behind the wheel to what he does in the sport doesn't know Dale Jr."

It's been a difficult year for Earnhardt on the track.

Concussion problems ended his 2016 season early. At the time of this writing, he's winless in 2017 and will be hard-pressed to qualify for the playoffs. "I was hoping he wouldn't come back after having all the trouble he had last year," NASCAR legend Richard Petty tells NBCSN's NASCAR America. "I realize how hard it is to get out of the racecar, because that is what we do for so long and enjoy so much. Whether you win or lose, it's hard to give up. I'm glad he went along and made the decision."

NBC Sports' 2017 NASCAR race coverage begins June 30 at Daytona with the XFINITY Series Subway Firecracker 250 on NBCSN, and the Monster Energy Cup Series Coke Zero 400 the following night on NBC. NBCSN and NBC combine to air the final 20 races of the Cup Series and the last 19 races in the XFINITY Series. The Cup Series playoffs begin in September, with six races on NBCSN and four – including the final three of the season – on NBC.

ACROSS & DOWN By Donna Pettman

DIRECTIONS

Rearrange the letters in each group to form a word. Place the words into the diagram so that the same words read both across and down. (The first word across is the same as the first word down and so on.) The letter groups are not necessarily placed next to the row of the diagram in which they go.
